Behind the Statistics of Global Dating: China's Personal Love Stories

Marriage on the Rise Between Western Men and Asian Women

April 15, 2010 – Bangor, Maine – Many men from America and Europe are fascinated by Chinese women due to their natural beauty, traditional values and romantic ideals. While in the West there's an ongoing dilution of the value of marriage, the perception of Chinese women is that they are the personification of fidelity and wedded bliss. Research shows that the 2010 divorce rate in the U.S.A was around 50%, more than 30% higher than in China according to the country's Ministry for Civil Affairs.

Globalization and the internet now make it simpler than ever to meet and marry a Chinese woman so it's no longer necessary to be a Woody Allen or Rupert Murdoch – both famous for having Asian wives. In recent months international dating website AsianBeauties.com has reported a purple patch of new relationships between its members. Features such as Live Chat, Phone Introduction and Email Correspondence have led to an increased number of men registered on AsianBeauties to get in touch with beauties across the Orient.

Once an online connection has been established through AsianBeauties men can travel over to meet their match in person, either on an organized AsianBeauties Romance Tour or on a private trip. Guiqin from Shenyang, member of the site, spoke of how she first got together with her fiancée Martin in February 2011, "We met each other at Shenyang city airport. We were so excited. Martin met all my family. My mother liked him very much, he calls my mother 'Mum'. We got engaged on 4th March." Dating sites like AsianBeauties have made such romantic meetings commonplace in airports across Asia.

Due to the whirlwind nature of international dating it's often the case that once couples have met marriage follows soon after. ShunRong from Chongqing spoke of her plans to join fiancée Ken after meeting on AsianBeauties, "Now my fiancé has gone back to his homeland, Canada, and I study English every day and prepare to visit him. I'm looking forward to our bright future...we'll build a happy family."

Although many new Chinese brides often emigrate to the U.S.A., it's not all one way traffic when it comes to marriage between Western men and Chinese women. After Paul from Los Angeles met Weihua Zhu from Guangzhou he decided to up and move out to China. "We started to build our relationship on this site in August and he flew to Guangzhou to meet me and we got married on 31st December," said Weihua, "Now he's working in Guangzhou and applying for his Z Visa soon."
